Dr. Tanner's Long Fast.

longest well-attested case on record, bas attracted universal attention, yet few persons seem to understand that it has any significance as a scientific experiment. So far as I have observed from reading the dispatches, neither Dr. Tanner nor any one of his professional brethren have given the public any very definite idea of the practical results for good that are expected to flow from the demonstrated fact that a person can live forty days without food. Some hints have been thrown out pointing to a scientific hypothesis. but no system has been evolved. So far as the public is concerned, it has been and still is a forty days' wonder. It is a marvelous feat of endurance. If that were all Dr. Tanner would deserve to be catalogued with other professional mountsbanks who display marvelous powers of endurance by walking 500 miles in 500 hours, or by running, leaping swinging, rowing, wrestling, etc. I hope and believe that Dr. Tanner was induced to make this experiment by a much higher and more worthy motive than the wish to achieve a cheap notoriety by exciting the organ of marvelousness in the brain of the vulgar public. I shall, therefore, expect him to onlighten the world as to his real object at no distant day. I can understand that he could have excellent motive for not doing so in advance of or until the close of his fast. That would have divided the interest and lessened it with most persons. It would have divided the interest and lessened it with most persons. It would have divided the interest and lessened it with most persons. It would have appeased instead of excited their curiseem to understand that it has any signifithat he could have excellent motive for not doing so in advance of or until the close of his fast. That would have divided the interest and lessened it with most persons. It would have appeased instead of excited their curiosity. If one is to get the public car as a teacher he must first become famous. This Dr. Tanner has done. The people will now listen to what he has to say on the unpopular subject of dietetics. I am of opinion that a fast of ten days would have been sufficient to have demonstrated any theory he may have formed in regard to the injurious influence of evereating or the boneficial effect of periodical fasting.

But it would not have set the world agog and made him notorious. It would not have so excited public curiosity that the people would have been willing to pay a good round.

I have left a deep interest in this experiment because left a deep interest in this experiment because I saw in its success opportunity for Dr. Tanner to do great good as a teacher in a field where teachers are sadly needed. The masses of the people live to cat. Very few people cat with any definite idea of the relations existing between food and life and health. The propertion of the people who know the difference between food and something to cat is quite small. The consequence is that dyspepsia is almost universal and the shortest road to wealth is through the valley of quarkery.

wealth is through the valley of quackery.

Anxiously awaiting an ample exposition of Dr. Tanuer's theory, I am, yours respectfully,

M. Cona Bland, M. D. Washington, August 6. The Death of Hen. H. R. Hubbard. To the Editor of The National Republican :

Sin: The burning of the Seawanbaka has occome memorable for the spectacle It gave of the worst and best of human nature. The owner of a yacht, who saved many lives from the water and flames, says he witnessed the sickening sight of men in boats refusing to take people out of danger until money was promised, and all readers of newspapers know of the brutal selfishness of the editor whose previous practice of murdering the reputations of innecent men should prevent surprise at this last exhibition of his true nature.

But let us turn from this sad study of the worst in our race and be thankful that the better side was shown in instances too remarkable to let discut of remembrance. Of the markable to let disout of remembrance. Of the gallant captain who remained at his post in spite of the flames as long as remaining there would aid the safety of his passengers, the public is informed. A Happy Restoration.

I can truly say that I owe my present ex-stence and happy restoration to the hopes and joys of life, to the use of Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure, and I say to everyone suffering from any manner of kidney, liver or arinary trouble, "Use this remedy and recover."

W. E. SANFORD.

HOLLEY, N. Y., February 25, 1880.

A conclusion drawn from Mr. Walter A CONCLUSION drawn from Mr. Walter Blaine's article on Alaska in the New York Tribune is that the vast territory, with an area of 580,107 square miles, is not worth the price of a good farm in any of the western states or a fair-sized house lot in an eastern city. Yet Mr. Seward paid $7,200,000 for this barren waste. Never before were the United States cheated in a purchase of territory; and even Alaska may be worth its price, from a sentimental point of view, when manifest destiny has gripped Canada and the United States extend to the north pole.
